Principles of Accounts is a major new textbook which provides in-depth coverage of all aspects of the CXC Principles of Accounts and Book Keeping syllabuses at basic and general levels. It is also an invaluable resource book for students preparing for advanced level accounting and for those taking accounting examinations with other examining bodies. Emphasis is placed on a clear, thorough, step-by-step presentation suitable for both classroom use and self study. Worked examples of typical exam-style questions reinforce the text and illustrate the layout of different kinds of accounts. Numerous exercises in each chapter give students plenty of practice on questions based on CXC requirements. Selected answers are given at the back of the book.

principles of reasoning and what kind of justification for them can be offered? We think of principles like that of non-contradiction as first principles of reasoning. Laurence Bloom argues that Plato's Republic, the first text that affords us a complete statement of the Principle of Non-contradiction, offers us a powerful, complex and detailed argument for taking form—specifically that of the good—as the first principle of both knowing and being.

The process of biological development is an amazing feat of tightly regulated cellular behaviours--differentiation, movement, and growth--powerful enough to result in the emergence of a highly complex living organism from a single cell: the fertilized egg.
